STAMFORD, Conn., November 20, 2012 /PRNewswire/ – Broadhaven Capital Partners announced today that Michael Deleray has joined the firm as a Partner. Mike has enjoyed a distinguished career in financial services as a senior executive, investor and strategic advisor, and will be a key participant in Broadhaven's expanded coverage of the global financial services industry.

"We are extremely pleased to welcome Mike to Broadhaven, adding to our deep expertise across the financial services spectrum," said Greg Phillips, co-founder of Broadhaven. "Our clients and portfolio companies will immediately benefit from his experience as an executive and strategic advisor."

As an executive with more than 20 years experience, Mike brings to Broadhaven successful advisory and operational experience working with both established and emerging companies and management teams.

Mike currently serves as a Director of Solium Capital, a software-as-a-service company that specializes in the administration and execution of equity-based incentive and savings programs for corporations and employees.

"Broadhaven provides the independent, high quality strategic advice which I valued as an executive, and I am excited to join the team," said Mr. Deleray.
